

NEW JERSEY. BROOKLYN.

BLEW OPEN THE SAFE. $10,000 FOR FINN'S KISSES.

Burglars Get Over $2,000 from the Perth Amboy Post-Office.

A Policeman Three Blocks Distant When the Explosion Was Heard.

When He Reached the Building the Cracksmen Had Vanished.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Nov. 2.—At 2:30 o'clock this morning the post-office was broken into and robbed of over $2,000.

The job is believed to have been done by expert cracksmen.

The safe was blown open and money and stamps to this amount were taken.

The thieves escaped.

The post-office is a one-story brick building at the intersection of New Brunswick avenue and State street.

A burning gas jet directly in front of the safe, illuminated it, and the entire post-office.

The window shades were always kept up.

At 3 o'clock this morning Policeman Dunham passed the post-office. He said that at that hour everything was all right.

The policeman has a long beat, and passes the post-office once every thirty minutes.

At 3:30 o'clock, Dunham, when three blocks away, heard an explosion.

He ran to the post-office and found the door on the New Brunswick avenue side open.

General Jean's Daughter Demands That Sum In a Suit.

Her Sisters Witnessed the Carriage, But Papa Was Not Told.

Ten thousand dollars for a kiss, or several, with the code of honor-like hug thrown in, is the price asked by Isabelle Jean, the pretty eighteen-year-old daughter of Gen John N. Jean, of 277 Wyckoff street, Brooklyn, in a suit brought against Philip A. Finn, the well-to-do desk and showcase manufacturer, of 28 and 32 Centre street, New York.

Finn is twenty-six years old, and lives at 129 East Eighty-sixth street, New York. He was recently arrested on a charge of forcibly kissing Miss Jean at her home, and when the case came up for trial Justice Tighe placed him under $500 bonds to keep the peace.

The present suit is brought by Lawyer George F. Elliott, and will be tried in the City Court by Judge Osborne. The papers in the case were served to-day.

The suit is based upon an affidavit of Miss Jean, corroborated by her sisters, Jeanne and Margaret, and her mother. Miss Jean says that Finn made frequent visits to her home under pretense of seeing her father on business, during the months of July, August, September and October.

On Sept. 20 and 25, the affidavit says, "Finn grossly insulted and assaulted her by violently seizing her around the waist, and attempting to pull her up on his knee. At other times he put his arm around her neck and kissed her upon the cheek. For this reason the plaintiff asks damages to the amount of $10,000."

Miss Jean alleges that her two sisters witnessed his actions. They corroborated her by testifying that they saw him threaten Gen. Jean with arrest. Miss Jean says she fought to free herself from his grasp. She did not tell her father at first, because she was afraid he would be arrested as a kidnaper.

Later Finn brought legal proceedings against Gen. Jean to recover the price of a showcase he had sold him, and then Miss Jean swore out a warrant for Finn's arrest.

Gen. Jean is a jeweller. He won his title in the army of Haiti, and received a law in France. He is interested in a rubber plant in Haiti, which Finn says was the cause of his frequent visits to the house. Finn at one time thought of investing money in the rubber plant.

SATIRE FOR GLEASON.

Jeffersonian Democrats Make It Hot for the Ex-Mayor.

LONG ISLAND CITY, L. I., Nov. 2.—The canvass in Long Island City between ex-Mayor P. J. Gleason, who is now a candidate for Assembly on the Jeffersonian party ticket, and the Jeffersonian Democrats, who are running John P. Madden for Assembly, is red hot.

The Jeffersonian Democrats to-day had the following printed circular distributed among the voters:

Having nominated myself as a candidate for Assembly, I desire to present the following to you:

I am P. J. Gleason. I was Mayor for six years, and tried to hold the office three years more. I spent $40,000 more of the people's money than I was allowed while in office. The people became tired of me, and when I would not get out of office, I was driven out.

I am a friend of the workingman. I pay my men $1 per day and give them some kicks and cuffs also. I am a taxpayer's friend. I have an engine for $50 and sold it to you for $2,500. The engine is alive today.

I am living on the $5,000 rent you pay me for the City Hall, which I managed to get hold of from the sewer estate. I don't pay any taxes, as I can find better use for the money.

I will introduce a bill in the Legislature to stop building sewers, and I will pass a bill to stop the use of the City Hall, and pay me $5,000 for the use of the City Hall, and Gerard property, $5,000 for the old house on Grand avenue, and I gave you a school and $5,000 for the use of the Centennial Hotel, which was used for a school.

Ex-Mayor Gleason came out with a new campaign document, which he is going to put on all his cars. It is written on a big piece of muslin and reads: "When I was Mayor no fireman had to pay for being appointed."

It is claimed that there are several hundred Italians who have registered with the city, and who have been looking up the registry lists have been summoned before the Grand Jury. It is expected there will be wholesale indictments.

A BROOKLYN SOLOMON.

McGann and McGann Difficulties Settled by a Wise Justice.

Elizabeth McGann, of 40 Prospect street, Brooklyn, was before Justice Walsh, in Adams Street Court, Brooklyn, this morning to answer a charge of retaining a trunk belonging to Henry McCann, who was formerly a boarder.

McCann explained to the Court that he was a veteran of the late war, and the trunk contained his discharge and other papers, which he had to have in order to draw his pension.

"Your Honor," said the woman, "he owes me $10 for board. I'll give him his trunk when he pays me my bill."

"I'll pay the bill," replied McCann.

"I'll give him his pension papers," said the Court, "and after that his money he can redeem the trunk."

IGNORED A SUBPOENA.

Now Diehl Langtushes in Danance for Contempt of Court.

Charles Diehl, of 125 Greene avenue, Brooklyn, was charged in the Gate Avenue Police Court this morning with criminal contempt of Court. This was the first case of the kind ever entertained in the Second District Court.

On Oct. 30 Mrs. Amanda Kreig, of 335 Hinson street, charged Mr. Diehl with knocking her down and kicking her.

The case was brought to trial, when Mrs. Kreig said she had twice subpoenaed Diehl, but he refused to come.

Diehl was arrested by a court officer. He said he had read the subpoena, but did not need to come, "because I thought it was a joke."

Diehl was remanded.

Would-be Bridge-Jumper Killion Says It Was the "D. T.s."

Dennis Killion, twenty-eight years old, who lives in the Washington Hotel, at 153 East Twenty-third street, New York, charged with attempting to commit suicide by jumping off the Brooklyn Bridge, was fined $5 for intoxication by Justice Walsh, in the Adams Street Court, Brooklyn, this morning.

Killion denied that he had intended to jump from the bridge, but said he was on the verge of delirium tremens.

SKELLY TOO ILL TO APPEAR.

One of His Alleged Assassins Arraigned in Court.

George Moloney, of 165 South First street, Brooklyn, was arraigned before Justice Walsh in the Adams Street Court this morning for examination on a charge of stabbing Jack Skelly, the pugilist, in the neck with a fork. A certificate signed by a physician stated that Skelly was too ill to appear in court.

That is false," said Moloney, "for have the word of a well-known business man that he was seen riding on a street car yesterday."

Moloney also said that his child was lying at the point of death and he wanted the court to release him. Justice Walsh adjourned the hearing until next week. Tommy Creed, another boxer, who is also accused of assaulting Skelly, has not yet been arrested, and Moloney intimates that the police are purposely allowing him to remain at liberty.

SPORTING MISCELLANY.

There has been little clamor recently against the anti-pool betting amendment, which, if adopted, would perhaps put an end to horse racing in this State. A quiet feeling of confidence seems to have crept into the minds of race owners, racing men and others most directly concerned, and it is taken for granted that the measure must be defeated. Wherever discussed, the clause is met with a shrug of the shoulders and a shrug of the shoulders.
